- The meeting went well and confirmed the consolidation of Air France and KLM under the same pricing agreement. Two new buyers have joined: Rodin for Air France and Isabelle for KLM. As always with new buyers, there is some risk: they often arrive with new ideas and a desire to challenge existing processes. Isabelle, coming from a different industry, initially suggested changes, but Air France made it clear that any modification must go through engineering due to the extensive validation required. This helped set realistic expectations.
- Isabelle also mentioned she intends to run pricing “round robins,” comparing our materials against other suppliers. While this approach is unlikely to hold in practice, we must remain cautious. It is important to emphasize that even if marginal savings appear possible, the risk of switching suppliers is far greater than potentially jeopardizing a seat program or, worse, an aircraft delivery.
- A full call report has been circulated.

- An internal meeting is scheduled this week to prepare for SFH's upcoming visit with Emirates. The focus will be to analyze purchasing patterns and investigate the reasons behind the recent dip in POs. Possible explanations include the completion of A380 retrofit programs and a slowdown in maintenance-related orders. This would follow the post-COVID surge, with retrofit demand now tapering off and not yet fully offset by new linefit requirements.
